Very solid game, considering that it was created by an indie developer! It is fun to play and the gameplay is easy to understand. What really helped me is the mode you can play against the AI. It definitely boosted my confidence easily beating the so-called "easy" AI after getting rekt by a friend multiple times in a row.

On a sidenote I have to add that the soundtrack is awesome and really fits the futuristic theme of the game design.. its obvious this game was either made in someones spare time or perhaps even for a class prject, so ill be leniant, it looks good, but thats because of the engine, it handles dreadfully. i was lured in by the possinility of there being combat but couldnt bare to get passed the first level due to how sluggish the movement was, and due to when landing after a jump the camera clips through the ground. seems advanced for something made asa class project but bad for anyone seeking to be payed for this.. Autoduel, DuelTrack, CarWars...

Dark Future wishes it were them. But you know what? THEY AIN'T HAD A VIDEO GAME SINCE 1986. And as cool as that game was for Apple ][e, this here game is pretty nifty and shiny. I've been through the first mission and I'm looking forward to the rest. Well worth the price of admission.

Perhaps not what some are looking for, it has a definitely turn-based feel, but it has that necessary CarWarsy vibe to me.

So, play this, and when your computer is pale and dusty, log in to Real Life with tabletop car minis: Car Wars Sixth Edition will be Kickstarted later this year, keep an eye out for it, Automotive Combat fans!. Well made VR movie with a horror theme. It's free, so try it.. someone please play this game. The best way to describe Too Angry To Space is you took Doom '93 and made it into a side scrolling run-n-gun game like Contra. And oddly, that's exactly what the story to this game is, where you're the last remaining survivor on a space station after an alien infestation overran it, killing everyone else but you. Now, it's up to you to get to the exit after you slaughter everything in your path.

It won't be easy getting there, though and there are times where you will die. A lot. Okay, perhaps very often, because this game will not give you a tutorial of how to do stuff. Everything is given to you at the start including the rules and it's up to you to figure out how to do it. There's no hand-holding involved. No strategy guides, no waypoints telling you where to go, no objective lists telling you what to do next, none of that. It's just you and 14 levels of old school shoot 'em up action that will get harder and harder the longer it goes.

Now, comes the question. Do I recommend this? Yes, but in a limited capacity, because this game will kick your\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665if you come into it unprepared. And on top of that, it's at a really good price, so you're really not gonna break your wallet in half.

Did NES return in our world? Definitely - YES!). Is it worth the 60 bucks? Depends how you like City Building sims. If you don't, this game gets boring quick. If you do, this game has an awesome complex engine. From the economy to the stock market to setting up the traffic lights so that your buses profit more. Yes it's very complex and has a very high learning curve. Once you figure out how a city operates, it's pretty easy from there on. The attention to detail is fairly high. The goal is to profit 100 Billion dollars in a different scenerio. It can take days or even months to pass a mission or a scenerio. It's not just trains, it's mostly center around making money so that your economy survives. From under population to nuclear power, which can cost you to lose money. All has to balance out and that's something you have to figure out. The key to success for me was building the population. It is a challenge in any scenerio, but once you figure that out, it's fairly easy. The hard part for me was building the rail system. It's very complex. You can go meters in the sky or go underground, even underwater. The goal is to let the population spread out. You also don't want to overbuild because the population will get bored of your city and leave. For me it is worth the price.. Abandoned in beta. Do not give them money.. I will post some live gameplay at <https://goo.gl/EsYnLc> or nobledroidgaming.com

For the price, i must say this is quite good. This game brings RTS and FPS together. Game needs some polish but runs quite well!
Keep it up Devs, a little gem here.. It is an okay game if you like walking simulators and puzzles. Not a whole lot of fun though. I can't recommend it however because I have clipped through objects and fallen off the map 3 times already. And with autosaves, you lose your progress. Maybe if you can get it at 90 percent off it would be okay.. First of all, the Loco is really nice. The detail, sound and functions are great imo. But there is some big problem with the lights. Especially the StepLights. If you turn them on you got a huge framerate drop down to 5 or 10 fps. If you turn on the class lights or head lights there is also a smaller framerate drop. So better don't drive this Loco at night or WATCH THE STAIRS with a flashlight^^. Really wanted to like this but it's nowhere near as fun as Tropicco 4. Far too much micro managing the factions and happiness levels, which can't be done with any satisfaction, resulting in regular rebel attacks. Persistant islands are a good idea, but if there's issues on one you'll have double the problems of completing any future levels on that island.. I just got a world record on this game.. Fun arena shooter and very cheap aswell.
