Sensorineural hearing loss associated with hypothyroidism was first described in 1985. Subsequently, this disorder was classified as hereditary sensorineural hearing loss with deafness associated with a defect in thyroid function. This type of hearing loss is characterized by an early onset and poor response to treatment. A review of the literature found 12 cases of hereditary sensorineural hearing loss with deafness associated with hypothyroidism reported in the English literature. Our patient represents the 17th reported case. The patient, a 21-year-old woman, was referred to our clinic for both hearing loss and hypothyroidism. She had a history of only familial sensorineural hearing loss. After careful examination, she was diagnosed with sensorineural hearing loss with deafness associated with hypothyroidism. We believe that, along with the genetic and environmental causes, the condition is affected by a combination of both gene and environment. Further molecular studies of this rare syndrome may lead to a better understanding of the biology underlying this disorder. Fever and non-cardiac chest pain in the patient with HIV disease. It has been estimated that one in every five patients with HIV disease develops cardiovascular disease and another one in five develops a non-AIDS related malignancy 82157476af
